Somewhere in all this Karr had found the mystical ardor of words, in her mother's volume of Shakespeare and in the library and classroom. Or perhaps the point belongs to Socrates, who, having been condemned in Plato's "Apology," asks his accusers to trouble his sons after he is gone: "If they pretend to be something when they are really nothing, then reprove them, as I have reproved you, for not caring about that for which they ought to care.
