he maintained a sentimental attachment to the multinational empire to the end of his life is demonstrated by Arabella, his last opera libretto for Richard Strauss, premiered posthumously in 1905. As well as drawing attention, in his representations of the enormous personal sacrifices demanded by their profession, to long hours and often poor remuneration, he lays bare in plays such as Narrenspiel des Lebens Fools Game of Life, and Vivat academia the hierarchical career structures and mix of idealism and cynicism that he sees as characterizing the medical profession.
