Black, Stephen L. The participants were then placed in a room with someone they thought was another participant, but was actually a confederate in the experiment. Ryan Gillespie marked it as to-read Feb 16, Which Archetype Are You? Thus subjects given an opportunity to observe aggressive models later reproduced a good deal of physical and verbal aggression as well as nonaggressive responses substantially identical with that of the model. And Eron, L. Others pushed the boundaries of the field and created controversies that still exist. The imitative physical and verbal aggression were rarely, if ever, exhibited by the children exposed to the nonaggressive model or no model at all.
